

GETTING THE MOST OUT OF YOUR NDIS PLAN

FACT SHEET #9

Goals

Part of preparing for your plan review is setting goals. Your goals help work out what supports could be funded by the NDIS. You need to think carefully about the objectives you have in life. This is often more important than thinking about the actual services and supports that you want.

Outcome Domains

The NDIS has developed a list of different parts of ordinary life where people may need support. They call these “Outcome Domains”.

There are eight outcome domains, and reflecting on these can help participants think about goals in different areas of their life. They can also assist planners to explore where supports in these areas already exist and where further supports are required.

These domains are:

- | | |
|-------------------------|-------------------------------------|
| 1. Daily Living | 5. Work |
| 2. Home | 6. Social & Community Participation |
| 3. Health and Wellbeing | 7. Relationships |
| 4. Lifelong Learning | 8. Choice and control |

Thinking about these different areas of your life, and setting goals, you may want to consider things like:

- Where you live;
- Relationships you have with others, or want to have;
- Your Health and your wellbeing;
- Education, and other learning opportunities;
- Work, both volunteer and paid;
- Social and community activities;
- Your likes and dislikes

Setting Goals

An NDIS plan usually has two short-term goals and a few medium-to-long-term goals. Short-term goals are the focus for how funding is provided. So, if a goal needs to be achieved in the next twelve months, it should be written as one of the short-term goals. Longer term goals are life goals, things that you aim for over a number of years. You can carry over life goals from one plan to the next.

Goals should focus on an outcome, rather than the services needed to achieve the outcome. For example, if you attend a day program, the goal might be “To spend more time in my local community and develop skills so that I can be more independent”, not “To attend my day program.”

GETTING THE MOST OUT OF YOUR NDIS PLAN

FACT SHEET #9

Goals need to be broad enough for you to make creative changes throughout the plan and use different types of services to achieve the goal. For example, “I want to access a range of recreational activities that I enjoy”, not “I want to do horse riding and swimming”. If assessments or therapies are needed in the plan, you might need to have a goal that refers to the outcomes of those supports. For example, if the person needs an assessment from a Speech Therapist, the goal might be “To improve my verbal communication so that I can be as independent as possible”.

It is OK to have a short-term goal that brings similar ideas together. For example, “Meet new people so I can have more friends, start volunteering and get a job”. If you need multiple therapies or assessments, you can put them all together in one short-term goal. For example, “To improve my relationships, communication and mobility so that I can be as independent as possible.”

The 3 NDIS Support Purposes (budgets) and the 15 Support Categories align with the 8 Outcome Domains. This helps you choose supports that help achieve your goals. This table shows the links between the three areas.
